The program has received state adult education funds through Elgin School District U46 and United Way of Elgin funding for children since 1972.

Today's students are more prepared than past groups have been. With the influx of southeast Asian refugees in early '80s came pupils who had never held a pen, Berna said. Today, literacy is taught in ref- ugee camps.

Steps, small and large

Student success stories range from the tiny victories of mothers who can finally communicate teachers to graduates who start their own businesses.

Keo Siriboun said she would have been like a blind person without the help she received when she arrived in 1986. At first, she worked in a Lao food store so that she didn't have to learn English.

Like many proud Asian mothers, Siriboun still tends to defer to her children to communicate for her.

"I was lucky," he said. "It really was scary. They have a lot of soldiers in the bank. I escaped about 4 o'clock in the morning."

When he arrived in the U.S., he couldn't fill out a job application. Today, he operates his own industrial sewing business from his garage. He makes plastic curtains for the airlines to use on serving and baggage carts.

He took ESL and vocational classes at the YW, where people who had come before him served as inspiration.

HISTORY

Precision Tarp was founded in 1997. Sisombath Philavong, a Laotian refugee started a small sewing company in his garage. Since then Precision Tarp has proudly serviced the Chicago-land area with their two facilities located in Elgin and Chicago IL. Through humble beginnings, this modest company has evolved into installing and manufacturing tarps for all types of dump body trailers. Today, we are honored to say that we are still a proud family-owned company, and we still stand by ensuring the best quality in our product and our services.
